

Transcript to committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former presidential aide Charles W. Colson wanted to try the James Earl Ray case in the newspapers instead of the courts, a document obtained by the Senate Watergate committee shows.

Colson's wish to discredit Elberg played a role in the White House battle of it, those and him, according to the document, in a transcript of a July 1, 1973, telephone conversation between Colson and Elberg.

In the conversation, Colson told Elberg that Elberg was likely to be named in a matter by the "New Left" unless something was done to counter it.

Colson said that he had suggested Elberg to write a book about the Watergate break-in that he was not interested in.

Can sun's energy be harnessed?

and scientists on the ground produced these mind-boggling figures:

It was 30 times the size of the earth and equal to the power of more than 20 million atomic bombs.

It would supply the total energy needs of the earth, including such things as automobile and industrial engines, for 5,000 years or more.

"It's a big deal," said the lab's commander, "but the research resulted in the solar cells that convert the sun's rays to electricity to operate the Skylab station and most other space stations."
