Peabody's Star-Graham Complex's first-aid team continued its winning ways this past week as it took first place in the first-aid contest of the National Mine Rescue and First-Aid contests in Louisville.

To even qualify for the "World Series" of mine safety contests, a team must not only have a first place win in its home state, it also must have a first place victory in another state, according to Jeff Klinger, a spokesperson for Peabody in Henderson.

The Star-Graham team is also the champion in Alabama, and has held that title for the past five years.

Star-Graham also beat out defending champion Pyro Mining for the national championship.

Last month, Star-Graham and other Peabody teams won the competition in the Western Kentucky Mine Institute's Annual Safety Days contest at the fairgrounds here.
